(A) Title of Research:
Fostering Intercultural Competence in Foreign Language Learning

(B) Research Activities:

During the HDRSS grant period, this project advanced research and pedagogical development on fostering intercultural competence in foreign language learning through a synergistic approach combining (i) intercultural engagement activities and (ii) technology-enhanced approaches. Key activities included:

1. Technology-enhanced intercultural learning design and implementation

Intercultural learning activities were designed and implemented to support structured, reflective intercultural engagement. These activities were integrated into teaching/learning contexts and used to strengthen students' intercultural reflection, meaning-making, and communication.

2. Telecollaboration / virtual exchange dissemination and scholarly engagement

The project's conceptual framing and pedagogical insights were presented at multiple academic venues. All listed presentations were accepted and presented, allowing systematic engagement with scholarly feedback and strengthening of networks in language education and intercultural communication.

3. Exploration of XR-supported intercultural learning (student testing)

Small equipment supported exploratory trials of extended reality (XR) tools with students. This included testing XR-supported learning activities to evaluate feasibility and pedagogical affordances for intercultural learning tasks, with the aim of informing future course design and research directions.

4. Impact: course innovation and continued collaboration

Project activities contributed directly to course innovation through technology-enhanced intercultural learning design, and they supported continued collaboration with relevant academic partners and communities built through dissemination and project-linked engagement.
